A directory of Newfoundland and Labrador
Tourism Marketing Initiatives and how you can participate.

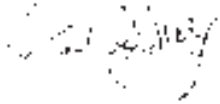

A Message from the Minister

I am pleased to share the details of the province's 2005 Tourism Marketing Plan. Our government is committed to the tourism industry and we believe that a consistent and sustained effort to market Newfoundland and Labrador will benefit the economy of the province.

The establishment of the Newfoundland and Labrador Tourism Marketing Council marks a new era of partnership and cooperation for the province's tourism industry. By working closely together, government and industry can effectively deal with both the challenges and opportunities of the future.

I look forward to the year ahead and extend my thanks to the Newfoundland and Labrador Tourism Marketing Council for providing their leadership and enthusiasm in assisting the department with the development of this plan.

Sincerely,

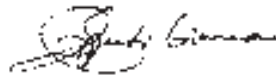

Paul Shelley
Minister of Tourism, Culture and Recreation

A Message from the Chair

Since its inception the Council has undertaken a detailed strategic planning process that has consisted of extensive information gathering. Through this process, the Council developed its first strategic marketing plan. The purpose of this plan is to communicate a vision for tourism marketing and to identify the key strategic priorities for the future. These strategic priorities provide the basis for the development of the 2005 marketing plan.

On behalf of the NLTMC, I thank our industry colleagues for their efforts and I invite you to take a closer look at the marketing plan and to work with us to promote Newfoundland and Labrador. We welcome your input, your partnership and the opportunity to grow our industry.

Sincerely,

Judy Sparkes-Giannou
